Question 2: Where do you think the Portrait of a Graduate competencies fit with this data?

Notes from March 12, BAC Meeting

- POG competencies are needed regardless of the information in the OMJ posting info, they are not reflected in the listing
- graduates don't always have what businesses need, but schools can teach some; schools can't teach all; soft skills are also taught through experiences and businesses need to understand that
- attendance is huge
- those skills are needed in all jobs
- Human Resources group member emphasizes ALL important
- attendance more important than GPA or test scores
- ghosting - def. going through the entire hiring process, get offered the job, accepting, and they do not show up
- (thinking jobs) critical thinkers and problem solvers=hands-on
- communication is all encompassing
- skills listed are very specific, not traits
- being empathetic and responsible seem to be top needs w/health care as top employer
- top certification: drivers license, GED, pass the drug test
- find positions versus postings
- every job on the list has something to do with the big 3 POG competencies: communication, critical thinking, adaptability
- responsibility should be high on the list

- flawed data because it tracks postings not positions

- position preparation
- questioning businesses
- hired, then get fired, how many? Who is able to keep the position
- cost of education?
- income for each job?
- which employers are looking for the different salary levels?
- where they search (young)
- can this be pushed to where students search
- market will improve career involvement

- top 3 certifications for...
- ability to compare
- have need in 3-years, 5-years, compare to schools need - good data
